- ❖ Our website - <http://capricornia.bwq.org.au/> has material for beginners and Walk Leaders, previous Newsletters and other useful bushwalking information.
- ❖ Please remember the Club is subsidising half the cost of an Accredited First Aid Course this financial year. The Management Committee will need to see the Certificate of Achievement and Receipt for the Course.

WALK REPORTS

ST MARY'S FALLS

23 March 2014

The last thing our leader, John, wanted was a long, steep climb at the end of our walk on a warm and humid March afternoon, so it was decided to tackle the St Mary's Falls walk from Upper Ulam. And what a good decision that proved to be.

Let's flash back to the morning of that day. We travelled as far as we could along a bush road, until we came across a sign – ROAD CLOSED. With the cars safely behind us, we briskly walked on along this road. To our east, towered the Scenic Rim with Donny's Lookout and the boundary of Belgamba peering down on us. Around us the vegetation was green and thick. From the trees and bushes the musical sounds of the spangled drongos and the petite red-backed fairy wrens filled the morning air.

Spangled Drongo

Red-backed Fairy Wren

Leaving the road, we hiked overland until we arrived at a shady morning tea spot on Oakey Creek - a very welcome break. Rock-hopping the remaining distance found us at a place just below the falls. These rocks turned out to be of significant interest. They were marbled with solidified molten basalt partly covering some and fully covering others.

Continuing on, we reached our destination – St Mary's Falls. Though the pool had dried up, the sight of abundant green maidenhair fern dripping with water gave us an idea of what it might have looked like, had there been a better wet season this year to date.

Maidenhair Fern at St Mary's Falls

After lunch we made our way back to the cars and enjoyed a mid-afternoon finish to a good, steady day's outing. Thanks John for taking the Club to a spot not visited for some years.

BAD BADGER SUNDAY, 6TH APRIL 2014

On a morning when most people would be sitting at home with their feet up, sipping coffee and reading the paper, eighteen intrepid adventurers decided instead to conquer The Badger. By three o'clock that afternoon, we were wishing we were "most people".

We started walking at 8:15 am, cheerful and optimistic about the day ahead. There were a few "new" walkers with us who had been duly warned about the "Evil Badger", but threw caution to the wind and came along for the day out. There was a certain amount of long grass, rocks, logs and the like as we expected on the steep ascent, but after all the rain there was much more vegetation than I recall from last time. Vegetation is okay, we expect that, even when it is difficult to see those in front and behind through the scrub. However it was when we reached the lantana that life began. Al (et al) did a wonderful job of bashing it down for the rest of us, but even then we spent some time on all fours crawling through it like bush pigs.

What are you doing down there, Mary?

A comment was overheard that we should call ourselves Capricornia BushBASHERS, not Bushwalkers. Few would have disagreed.

Smoko was partaken about two-thirds of the way up in a small clearing. Clouds of mossies did their best to carry us away, but we were so heavy from exhaustion they couldn't lift us. Neither Rid, nor Off nor Aerogard seemed to slow them up – they were impervious to all repellents. We summited at about 11.25 am – only three hours, not so bad. The walk along the ridges to Mt Risien was quite pleasant, and at least it wasn't steep. Walking among the grasstrees and cycads, with a cool breeze blowing and glimpsing magnificent views through the trees and from the ridge top, made us appreciate why we had forgone our morning papers to get out in the wilderness.

The descent of Risien was a different story. It was steep, with long, slippery grass, hidden loose rocks, logs, holes, and it seemed to go on and on forever. There was apparently no bottom to that slippery slope, which required intense concentration to negotiate without incident. Eventually we scrambled back down and followed a private road back to our cars, arriving shortly after 3.00 pm. The day had been a challenge, but we met it head-on and triumphed. We were especially proud of the "new" people for tackling such a walk and coming out alive. Hopefully they will return to the club for a more pleasurable walk and not be turned off bushwalking forever.

Meanwhile, after Alan had recovered (about Thursday!) he started talking about "when we do it next year..." Next Year, Alan? Are you serious? Okay, I just might (I said "might") pre-walk it with you carrying a machete. We'll see.

Mary

DINGOES, SNAKES AND RUGGED LANDSCAPES: THE LARAPINTA TRAIL 5 – 25 May, 2014.

It took six years but the majesty of the central Australian landscape lured me back in 2014. Ten Capricornia Bushwalkers completed the Larapinta Trail in 2008 but this time we were a small hardy bunch of five Capricornia and Gladstone bushwalkers – Cindi Birch, Margo Martin (a 2008 veteran), Fay and Frank Harkness and myself - and we were joined on several sections by John Rideout and Barbara Howard. Unfortunately, Deborah Mylrea was forced to withdraw from the start of the walk due to ill health.

Last time we did the walk in September (almost too hot) and this time chose May which was a much better climate. Last time we were mostly new to the whole long distance trekking idea and carried far too much weight. This time with many more miles of independent trekking behind us, we were a lot smarter weight wise.

Last time we walked from east to west – Alice Springs to Red Bank Gorge – and we had awe-inspiring views as we traversed both the Chewing and Heavitree Ranges. This time we walked west to east and the landscape was equally awe-inspiring. Any way that you choose to look at the West Macdonnell Ranges, you will be rewarded with amazing landscapes.

The real bonus this year was the abundance of wild flowers. Recent rains had ensured this. The added bonus was that we encountered dingoes in the wild on several occasions. Mostly at night and very close to our camp sites. It was an eerie experience but at the same time it felt special to have experienced it. The extra added bonus was that the creeks along the way had water. Not that we chose to drink the water but it did allow for the luxury of a “dip” at the end of a day's walk. Fortunately, the three snakes sighted along the Trail were not too interested in us especially the very large black snake that looked more like a car tyre.

We took the recommended 18 days to complete the walk and also allowed for a rest day at Standley Chasm and Ellery Creek Big Hole. The hardest parts of the Larapinta Trail are the more remote sections that usually involve major climbs coupled with the need to carry an extra day's water. This was not an easy task but all managed it without too much trouble.

Assisting us all along the way with renewing our food supplies on a 3-4 day basis was our ever reliable support driver, Ian Ellis. He even ventured into some pretty hairy four-wheel drive country to ensure that we remained well fed. Following Captain Cook's example, he provided us with a steady flow of oranges throughout the walk. There was no scurvy here. When he wasn't on the supply run, Ian was enjoying the company of his family in Alice Springs and biking all over the place.

Equipped with both a PLB (Personal Locator Beacon) and a hired Satellite phone, we felt quite secure in venturing into the more remote areas of the walk. The phone also gave families an opportunity to keep in touch or to reach us in case of emergencies. The major hiccup with the phone was that we were given the wrong number initially. However, we did finally realise this and managed to sort things out.

The end of most days saw us pitch our tents in places with remarkable views. The skies at night demanded that you slept without your tent fly. In brief, The Larapinta Trail gives you that unique opportunity to safely walk in a truly wonderful landscape for a lengthy period of time - a trekker's delight!

At the end of another rewarding trek – The Larapinta Trail

“HIBISCUS” CREEK

29 June 2014

A case of “second time lucky” for the “Hibiscus” Creek walk, as last year’s attempt had to be abandoned when, despite clear skies everywhere else, the Byfield ranges were shrouded in fog all day.

Off we set, with sunshine and a cool dry wind, initially clambering over small rocks in the creek bed, then bigger and bigger rocks as we climbed. Clear water flowed along the creek bed in places, and later tumbled over many small waterfalls. Around morning smoko time, views of the ocean, coast and sand blows could be seen in the distance. As the morning progressed, there were some mutterings along the lines of “are we there yet”, as the creek bed became even steeper, but eventually the climbing ended, and we reached our destination, a beautiful, deep, flowing rock pool, just after noon. Lunch time, everyone agreed! The resident shrimps were not offered bare skin to nibble on though, the water being deemed too cold for paddling or swimming.

“Hibiscus” Creek Rock Pool

After the visiting humans had their lunches, we said farewell to the shrimps, and returned slowly down the creek. There was much relief from the walkers when we finally made it back to the cars just after 3pm. All agreed that even though the distance travelled was only just over 2km each way “as the crow flies”, it had been a challenging walk.
